Located in Oatlands, Tasmania the Callington Mill Distillery was originally established by John Vincent back in the 1800's.

This revitalization project showcases the intricate beauty of brickwork, harmoniously paired with natural wood panelling design elements, further enhanced by striking geometric-shaped window installations.

Step inside, and you'll discover more than just a distillery. The Callington Mill Distillery is a sensory experience, featuring a barrel bar to wet your whistle, guided distillery tours and tastings, a restaurant for delightful dining, and a cellar door offering a curated selection of spirits.

The historical significance of the mill adds an intriguing layer to the experience. While its operations may not have been entirely legal in the 1800s, much has changed since then. Today, the Callington Mill Distillery stands as a legal and vibrant establishment, beckoning visitors to explore its rich history, indulge in exquisite spirits, and relish the charm of this beautifully restored landmark.
